

SOCIAL MEDIA

July: Week 1

(Image: photo of mom holding baby)

(File Name: July Week 1.jpg)

Sing to your baby! Studies show infant listeners are able to differentiate between sung and spoken stimuli and prefer parents and caregivers singing to them over speaking to them.

Read more about this study at :

<https://srcd.onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/abs/10.1111/cdev.12647>

#123connectwithme #singing #child

Tag: @SocietyforResearchChildDevelopment

July: Week 2

(Image: photo of mom touching noses with baby)

(File Name: July Week 2.jpg)

Did you know that singing to your child promotes connections, bonding and a feeling of security?

Learn more about why your child is comforted by song:

(link to “Come Sing with Me” article on your website or https://123connectwithme.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/07/123-Connect-with-Me_Connect-Kit_July-Article.pdf)

#123connectwithme #singing #baby #parenting

July: Week 3

(Image: graphic of foxes singing a book)

(File Name: July Week 3.jpg)

As your child gets older, encouraging them to sing with you can support the development of concentration, listening skills, memory and language development.

Need some ideas of what to sing with your child? Here is a list of rhyming books you can sing:

<https://thisreadingmama.com/rhyming-books-you-can-sing/>

#123connectwithme #singing #singtogether

Tag: @thisreadingmama

July: Week 4

(Image: photo of dad and mom holding baby)

(File Name: July Week 4.jpg)

Singing to your child is a great way to promote “serve and return” interactions. Parents and caregivers who are sensitive and responsive to a child’s signals help develop communication and social skills.

Learn more about the importance of serve and return interactions here:

<https://developingchild.harvard.edu/science/key-concepts/serve-and-return/>

#123connectwithme #developingbrain #infant

Tag: @CenterDevelopingChild